Acorn

We enjoyed a wonderful winter walk at the beginning of this week. As we soaked up some winter sun, we observed signs of winter. The children made observations about birds, trees, leaves and weather. We spotted some hardy wildflowers and evergreen trees and noticed some snowdrops had started to appear.

The blossoming of the snowdrop is a sign that winter is transforming to springtime. The snowdrop symbolizes the hope that winter will finish soon and that Spring is on its way!

Pete's buttons

We have enjoyed reading the book 'Pete the cat and his four groovy buttons' by Eric Litwin. The book has helped us practice our subtraction skills in a fun way. Each time Pete loses a button, the children needed to make the number by using buttons and represent their work using the part whole method and by writing a number statement. The children are becoming so confident at using language related to adding and subtracting and their understanding of the relationship between the two concepts is improving each week.
